

"I think the new arrangement looks fantastic."

Brother Peter Corr, fms
Headmaster
Marist College North Shore

Requirements

Marist College's website had been developed more than 6 years prior. Although the site could be updated by the school it lacked functionality and aesthetic appeal.

Marist College was keen to promote its web address in all its marketing material and advertising, however felt that the reputation of the school was not adequately represented by the website. It was time for a change!

Brother Peter Corr was mindful that the website was a compliment to the existing Catholic Education Office policies and eLearning resources. The site would not only have to look good and satisfy a range of requirements, but it would also have to operate alongside a sophisticated student portal and other online eLearning tools.

SitEducate' Solution

We were keen to not only exceed the design and functionality expectations of the school, but also deploy the project with as little fuss and imposition as possible. After all Brother Peter Corr and his team had a school to run!

As well as providing assistance to migrate content across from the old site, SitEducate provided onsite training to both content authors and site administrators. Due to the demands of getting the site up quickly, an interim training focusing on updating the news and calendaring sections of the site was provided to the school administration team.

As one of the founding schools on the SitEducate platform, Marist College has signalled their enthusiasm for both electronic newsletter and parent-teacher online booking functionality to be prioritised for development. We are keen to continue to work with Brother Peter Corr and his capable team to extend the barriers of technology, communications and school community engagements; whilst being mindful of already demanding school administration workloads and the need to make things easier.
